6. [redacted] Robert Hull, Department of State, called to ask for citations to the 1969 CIA Retirement Act amendments. He said they had received commitments on the Senate side that the equivalent House passed Foreign Service amendments would be taken up early in the Second Session. The Foreign Service bill also incorporates the three-month cost-of-living provision which because of the catchup effect would increase the annuities of those retiring up to two months after enactment by 9 percent, which Hull sees as an inducement to speed up retirements.
